Tasting Notes – This Zinfandel is an experience of terroir. Aromatics that express the loamy earth tones are intertwined throughout. Then blackberry jam with touches of wild raspberries starts to explode from the glass. At this point a subtle touch of lavender becomes the seductive focal point of the aromatics. The flavors of this wine are very much a mirror image of its aromas, but hints of Herbes de Provence, and the sweet smell of the sunshine after spring rain.

Pair With – Rustic and elegant, Iron Hill can be paired with wild game birds, turkey or your everyday chicken. Will also go well with lighter meats such as veal medallions in a cream sauce and of course sweet Italian sausage cooked over smoky coals.

“Topographically speaking, the amphitheater like vineyard, sitting at a steep 55° angle, profoundly influences the depth and concentration of the grapes. The rocky, volcanic soil provides just enough nutrients for the vine’s struggling existence. As in the past, this wine demonstrates the heights to which Zinfandel can go.” – Jeff Cohn
